NARROW ESCAPE.

During the South African war, says the Philadelphia Inquirer, an Irish trooper on outpost duty one night felt so desperately tired that he thought he would have a five minutes' nap. Placing his helmet on a log he lay down, and was soon in a sound sleep. Waking suddenly, he mistook his helmet for one of the enemy, drew his sword, and dealt it a severe blow. Then, perceiving his mistake, the trooper picked up his helmet, which he had cut in two, and gave thanks to heaven that he had taken it off before lying down. "For," he soliloquised, "had my head been inside that, it's ten to one a dead man I would have been seeing myself this moment."
